1. Introduction

This Nokia Privacy Statement Supplement for California Residents (“California Supplement”) supplements the Nokia Privacy Statement, available at www.nokia.com/privacy). In the event of a conflict between the two documents, this supplement will control.

2. Collection of your personal information - sources

Please see the information described in the Nokia Privacy Statement, including the section entitled “What Information do we collect?”

3. What categories of personal information does Nokia collect?

The information described in the Nokia Privacy Statement section entitled “What Information do we collect?” is supplemented by the list of the following categories, some of which may be similar to those described in the Nokia Privacy Statement. This is a general list and does not mean we collect all categories of personal information about every individual.

(A) Identifiers such as a real name, alias, signature, postal address, unique personal identifier(s), online identifier(s), Internet Protocol address, email address, account name, social security number, driver’s license number or other government issued identification number(s), passport number, telephone number(s), bank account number, credit card number, debit card number, or any other financial information or other similar identifiers.

(B) Commercial information, including records of personal property, records or services purchased, obtained or considered, or other purchasing or consuming histories or tendencies.

(C) Internet or other electronic network activity information, including, but not limited to, browsing history, search history, and information regarding a consumer’s interaction with an Internet Web site, application, or advertisement.

(D) Geolocation data.

(E) Audio, electronic, visual, thermal, olfactory, or similar information.

(F) Inferences drawn from any of the information identified in this section to create a profile about you reflecting your preferences, characteristics, psychological trends, predispositions, behavior, attitudes, intelligence, abilities, and aptitudes.

4. What are the purposes for which Nokia collects and uses personal information?

Please see the information described in the Nokia Privacy Statement, including the section entitled “Why do we process personal data?”, regarding the purposes to which Nokia will use the information Nokia collects.

5. What categories of personal information have been disclosed in the preceding 12 months?

As noted in the Nokia Privacy Statement, including the section entitled “Do We Share Personal Data?”, Nokia may make certain disclosures of your personal information to third parties. The categories of such personal information may include those listed below. This is a general list and does not mean we have disclosed all categories of personal information about every individual.

(A) Identifiers such as a real name, alias, signature, postal address, unique personal identifier(s), online identifier(s), Internet Protocol address, email address, account name, social security number, driver’s license number or other government issued identification number(s), passport number, telephone number(s), bank account number, credit card number, debit card number, or any other financial information, or other similar identifiers.

(B) Commercial information, including records of personal property, records or services purchased, obtained or considered, or other purchasing or consuming histories or tendencies.

(C) Internet or other electronic network activity information, including, but not limited to, browsing history, search history, and information regarding a consumer’s interaction with an Internet Web site, application, or advertisement.

(D) Geolocation data.

(E) Audio, electronic, visual, thermal, olfactory, or similar information.

(F) Inferences drawn from any of the information identified in this section to create a profile about you reflecting your preferences, characteristics, psychological trends, predispositions, behavior, attitudes, intelligence, abilities, and aptitudes.

6. What categories of personal information have been sold (as defined in the California Consumer Privacy Act) in the preceding 12 months?

Nokia does not sell your personal information.

What rights do you have?

Please see the information described in the Nokia Privacy Statement, section entitled “What Are Your Rights?” In accordance with the provisions of that section and California law, you have the following rights:

- You have the right to request that we disclose to you the categories and specific pieces of personal information we have collected about you in the 12 months preceding your request.

- You have the right to request that we delete any personal information we have collected about you in the 12 months preceding your request.
- You have the right to request that we provide you in response to a verifiable request from you or your authorized agent the categories of personal information we have specifically collected about you, the categories of sources from which we collected the personal information, the business or commercial purpose for collecting, disclosing or selling (as selling is defined in California law) the personal information, the categories of third parties with whom we have shared or sold your personal information, and the specific pieces of personal information we have collected about you, all within the 12 months preceding your request.

You may exercise these rights by managing your account and choices through our products and services.
